Yan Lixin, Teaching in the School of Economics and Institute for Financial Studies, Fudan University, Secretary-General of Financial Research Center; Secretary-General of China Centre for Anti-money Laundering Studies, which is the only academic institution specialized in AML(anti-money laundering) & CTF (counter terrorism financing) field. In mainland China, he is the forerunner -Certified Anti-money Laundering Specialist and becomes the first qualified internationalized AML-Instructor and trainer certified by Acams in 2009. Extraordinarily he has a broad educational background — Post-doctor of Communications, PhD of Economics, MBA and Bachelor of Arts in English. He also boasts his rich experiences covering several different industries such as long-term teaching in a university, serving as an official for the Foreign Economic Relations & Trade Commission of the government, acting as director of the board and general manager of an import and export company. He has written, compiled and translated tens of essays, theses, books and projects covering fields like anti-money laundering, economics, management, communications and language learning etc. He particularly enjoys popularity in the special field—anti-money laundering and counter terrorism financing.